

DESIGN-BUILD PROCUREMENT Learning from DOE

LUNCHEON MEETING

Wednesday, June 13, 2012

With the Public sector using traditional design-bid-build approach for years as their project delivery method, the Department of Education decided to change direction and use design build for the Lanai High & Elementary Classroom Buildings project. In this presentation, hear first-hand pro's and con's in the procurement process of a Public Design Build project. With construction now under way, we will also hear of the collaborative effort that is being put forth with the integrated team to bring a successful project to the island of Lanai. This presentation will be geared toward owners, as well as designers and contractors.

GUEST SPEAKERS

Duane Kashiwai, is the Public Works Administrator for the State of Hawaii, Dept. of Education. Duane oversees approximately $200 million annually for the design and construction of State of Hawaii educational facilities.

Robert J. Hartung, DBIA, is one of the Directors of the Western Pacific Region of the DBIA and the founder and President of Alternative Delivery Solutions LLC. Bob's clients include many different government agencies, among them the Hawaii DOE that retained him to help develop the RFP and select the design-builder for the Lanai High & Elementary School project. A senior DBIA Instructor, Bob speaks frequently at conferences, workshops, and universities and is an industry representative to the AIA's ongoing work toward Integrated Project Delivery.
