

INTEGRATED PROJECT LEADERSHIP

The common denominator for all integrated project approaches is the potential to draw from the collective knowledge and expertise of a multi-discipline team to deliver high value solutions for our clients. The owner expects such a team to engage and deliver "as one entity" regardless of the organizational structure and the contractual arrangement. That is their great hope when they choose design-build and hire all of us. However, developing that "as one" mentality doesn't happen by accident. Further, our traditional credentials and experience as contractors, architects and engineers do not prepare us for leading and leveraging the assets associated with such a unique team. This presentation will focus on the special set of skills and talents needed to lead high performance design-build teams and how best to capture and apply their collective knowledge and expertise to deliver comprehensive, integrated solutions.

LUNCHEON

San Francisco Marriott, Union Square

SPEAKER

Barbara Jackson, PH.D., DBIA

Director, Franklin L. Burns School of Real Estate and Construction Management, Daniels College of Business
UNIVERSITY OF DENVER

After 20 years in industry as a chief estimator, senior project manager, and CEO of Design-Build Services Inc., and another 15 years developing design-build and integrated project delivery education at Cal Poly in San Luis Obispo CA, Barbara has returned to Colorado where her education and career in design and construction originally began. In August of 2013, Barbara took over the helm as the new Director of the Burns School of Real Estate and Construction Management at the University of Denver, in Denver, CO.

There she has developed an educational model representing the full life-cycle of the built environment, including Real Estate, Project Delivery, and Facility/Asset Management. The new educational model also includes one of the most advanced Masters degrees in Integrated Project Delivery, designed to support AEC professionals in their transition from traditional project managers to Integrated Project Leaders.
