From your first DB RFQ or RFP to your most recent, what would you say has changed the most?

Why?

What are you doing to reduce the cost of the RFP process?

If there was one thing that would make your job easier during the RFQ/P process, what would it be?

As an owner, what are you getting out of the integrated DB process that you never expected?

As a designer, what are you getting out of DB that you never expected?

How much time does it take for you to get from the idea to issuing the RFQ?

Has this changed much since the early days of DB procurement?

A question for the audience: Owners don't always get a lot of feedback on what works or doesn't on an RFQ.

Would a few in the audience have some feedback?

So now you've got the team and it's time to dig into the project. How do you set the table?

How important is it for your team to know the DB process before starting a project?

What's your role in helping the team perform?

Ah-ha moment(s) that compelled you to change or tweak something you had been doing.
